Three Necessities of A Good School

There are two essential institutions in each and every community if it is to be a desirable place to live. One of these is the church and the other is the school.

As the word of the Church and her various organizations is essential even so is the work of the school and its various forms of organized activities essential to every community if it is to be a fit place in which to rear your children.

There are three situations essential to every good school, the order of naming which is non-essential, so far as importance is concerned, because all three are absolutely necessary to the building or maintaining a first class school. First, there must be sufficient physical equipment; such as suitable buildings, comfortable furniture, the necessary library and laboratory equipment and supplies, and play-ground apparatuses sufficient for the physical and moral development as well as the entertainment of the child. Second, there must be a co-operative patronage. Not only must the pupils, themselves, give their best efforts, but the parents of the pupils must, of necessity, give a hearty co-operation to the school proper and its supplementary activities as well. Just here is where many parents fail in duty to their school and hence to themselves, their children, and their country. The time is long past, if it ever was, when a first class school is composed merely of class recitations.

Attention must be given to the organized activities of the school. There must be work done in Glee Club or singing, in debating and oratory, and other forms of social activities, if there is to be development in good citizenship. Also, since the competition instinct is very strong in the child and since competition in school activities, such as games, contests in spelling, debate, etc., are among the very best methods of teaching good citizenship, surely, some attention must be given to them if the school is to function as it should.

Third, the teachers must be trained in their art, but even more necessary is their attitude toward their job. Equal with that of the preacher, is the responsibility of the teacher, if he or she be truly a teacher. As the pastor carries the cares of his people on his heart, even so does the true teacher carry the burdens of his or her pupils, both singly and collectively.

Bob Rowan.

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS

CHRISTMAS greetings are as old as the Christian era itself. Yet every year they are as fresh and inspiring, and fire as the greens of holly, mistletoe and evergreen that have always typified Christmas. Christmas greetings help to thaw out the ice in which a year of business has frozen us. It's good for the heart, and it's good for business, since it prepares us to start another year of business with a more human viewpoint.

Get the Christmas spirit. Let Christmas be a well spring of refreshment to your tired and thirsty soul.

To one and all we thank you for your patronage and wish you the merriest kind of a Merry Christmas. We would like to carry this message to you, and give it in the form of a good old-fashioned and cheap. We believe in the Christmas Spirit and we want everyone else to believe in it.

FIFTH ANNUAL ROLL CALL BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY

American Red Cross to Enroll Members Throughout Nation November 11 to 24.

The American Red Cross will conduct its Fifth Annual Roll Call this year beginning on Armistice Day, November 11, and ending the eve of Thanksgiving Day. National headquarters in Washington, division headquarters in the eight divisions of the Red Cross, and headquarters of each of the more than 2,000 chapters, are busily engaged on their Roll Call program, according to information given out at local Red Cross headquarters. The effort will be to re-enroll every present member of the Red Cross and to add as many new members to the roster as possible in the period given.

There are at present 6,041,163 members in the American Red Cross. John Barton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, hopes to hear the answer, "present," when each one of these names is called between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day this year, he says, thus providing for the continuance of the work of service to the public of America and the sufferers in foreign lands which the Red Cross has started and is conducting on the basis of its peace-time program.

In a letter sent out from national headquarters, W. Frank Persons, vice-chairman of the American Red Cross in charge of Domestic Operations, calls attention to the fact that the strength of the Red Cross in the past has been in its volunteer workers. He urges, therefore, that all chapter membership committees seek to re-enlist the largest number possible of the men and women who have served the Red Cross as volunteers in the past, and suggests that the Roll Call is a logical channel for bringing former workers back to service in the Red Cross.

The interest manifested in the Red Cross Convention at Columbus, Ohio, the first week in October, showed that the public is as keen to stand behind the work of the Red Cross in its peace-time program as during the war, and that the thinking public realizes that the Red Cross is as necessary to the welfare of the civilized world in time of peace as in war. Officials of the Red Cross believe, therefore, that the Roll Call this year will result in many more members than were placed on the roster of the American Red Cross last year.

The Red Cross throughout the country is putting on this year its new peace-time program, which includes public welfare service in every direction wherever such service is needed. In health work alone in the last year, 200 chapters have organized health centers with 6,284 clinics and 90,252 cases in these clinics. More than 4,000 health talks have been given by these and other chapters engaged in health work, and health exhibits to the total of 780, both traveling and stationary, have been set up to inform the public on matters pertaining to their own and their community's health.

It's really a matter of getting started. If you will call, we will show you illustrations of many charming homes from which you may select one that's just right for your requirements and means.
